At Florida Virtual School, planning for the future starts with remembering the past and understanding the school's continuing reason for being. It also means having the broadest possible perspective on what works best. These are some of the things that Holly Sagues contributes each day to the success of her school.

Since 1998, Ms. Sagues has lived the mission and core values of Florida Virtual School. She has also made the needs of students the driving force behind her educational career. Her first assignment at FLVS involved the development and teaching of her school's first business courses. In that assignment, she drew upon her extensive prior experience as a classroom teacher of business and computer science courses into which she had incorporated the most up-to-date technologies.

Over the years, Ms. Sagues' contributions to FLVS have been recognized with increasing levels of responsibility. Prior to her current position, she was responsible for the development and oversight of her school's information and instructional delivery technologies. Today, she is a vital resource to her school's President and Chief Executive Officer and the Leadership Team. In addition, she also provides data-based analysis and insights to her school's decision makers regarding growth initiatives, strategies for achieving school goals, and tactical procedures for day-to-day operations.

Ms. Sagues, who is a certified Project Management Professional, says her job is part objective analysis and part intuition. As a former businessperson with an extensive accounting background, Ms. Sagues understands the power of numbers for reporting current conditions and for identifying future prospects. As an educator and long-time member of the FLVS staff, she also has an intuitive sense of the needs of her school and its place in the advancement of education. She understands the promise offered by FLVS for making a significant difference in the quality of education available to all students.

Ms. Sagues earned her Master of Arts degree in Vocational Education and Technical Training, and her Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration and Accounting from the University of Central Florida.
